

9-to-5 News

The Daily News

Published: November 13, 2007

News about businesses and businesspeople.

EyeOn Automation donates to ABC show

ABC's "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition" recently knocked on the door of University of Louisville marching band member Patrick Henry Hughes and his family. The family's Louisville home will receive a makeover that will be featured on a future episode of the reality show.

EyeOn Automation was called upon to assist with installing special features for the family.

CEO Clinton Mills said "the EyeOn team is extremely honored to be a part of this worthy cause."

Detailed information about the home construction can be found at www.eliteextremedream.com. Founded in 2005 as a division of Hitcents, EyeOn Automation is based in Bowling Green, where it creates and installs residential and commercial automation solutions. EyeOn specializes in custom designed technology integrating electronic devices.

— For more information, visit www.eyeonautomation.com.